

I always tell people that I have the best students in the world at Temple and at OwlSports Update. And if I were asked to prove it on some sort of a PowerPoint, Erin would be one of the names on the first slide.

She is the perfect combination of smarts, compassion, persistence and patience. It's not easy being in charge of more than 30-40 student volunteers. She was tough when she had to be and always organized. She was great at taking a step back to see things from afar, but also not scared to get in there to tackle problems.

One of the things that I enjoy the most – is when I asked Erin to do something, it always got done. As a teacher with multiple classes and responsibilities, I always worry about things falling through the cracks. But that was something she never let happen.

Erin is a leader – and I would not only hire her in a second, but I would be happy to work for someone like her as well. In short, I am a fan.

Matt Fine
Temple University
Associate Professor of Practice, Klein College of Media and Communication

Department of Media Studies and Production
Executive Producer, OwlSports Update Productions